

STAR WARPS

FIRST EDITION - SEPT 2014

STAR WARPS: AN ONLINE BOOK OF ART INSPIRED BY STAR WARS.

While I've seen the original Star Wars trilogy (well, at least A New Hope and The Empire Strikes Back) more times than I can remember, a real Star Wars geek would not call me a true fan. I don't know the names of all the characters, spaceships, cities, or planets; however I have a personal connection to the universe that I feel is pretty special, and perhaps even drove me to work on this idea for so many years.

I was in my teens when the first movie came out and blew our minds. Immersed in the brand new London punk scene, I was also just beginning to experiment with hard drugs and basically having a great time. Then my life went to shit, and all the clichés about junkies became true for me.

While this internal fight of good and evil was raging, my Mom had started dating Irvin Kershner, director of The Empire Strikes Back. Each day, Kersh, as he liked to be called, would return from the set of Empire to our flat in north London. He knew my Mom was worried sick about me and would try to engage me by telling me little stories and tidbits of things that had happened on the set that day. One story I still remember was of the Millennium Falcon falling apart, and how they had spent the day busting up vacuum cleaners and hairdryers to glue bits onto the ship. I really did love hearing this stuff, and wished I could be drug free so I could direct Hollywood blockbusters, or at least do something a little more creative with my life. Sadly the pull of the dark side was too strong and by the time Empire came out I was much like Han Solo, frozen in the tibanna gas and encased in carbonite, basically alive but not living. It took until The Return of the Jedi for me to break free and return to some sense of sanity.

Years later, now healthy in New York and with my new, less evil, yet almost as consuming addiction, art, I met four diverse and super talented artists: Bill McMullen, The Sucklord, JK5, and Kostas Seremetis. Inspired by their work, they in turn were excited by my idea of curating a project of this nature, and encouraged me further. The project finally became reality when I met Philip Kuperberg, a technology wunderkind who designed and constructed the "book" that you are about to journey into.

The artist's styles, mediums, and subjects are diverse, but the two main themes that emerge are either culture-jamming, or works by artists who were simply inspired and/or influenced by Star Wars and have incorporated some element of the universe into their work. The collection is chronologically curated with the earliest work by an artist being the starting point of that artist's profile in the book. The art itself, runs the gamut from works by internationally-known fine artists, exhibited in blue-chip galleries and museums, to unidentified Tumblr mash-up's and memes.

Other than the four artists mentioned here, none of the creators of these works had knowledge they were being included in this project.

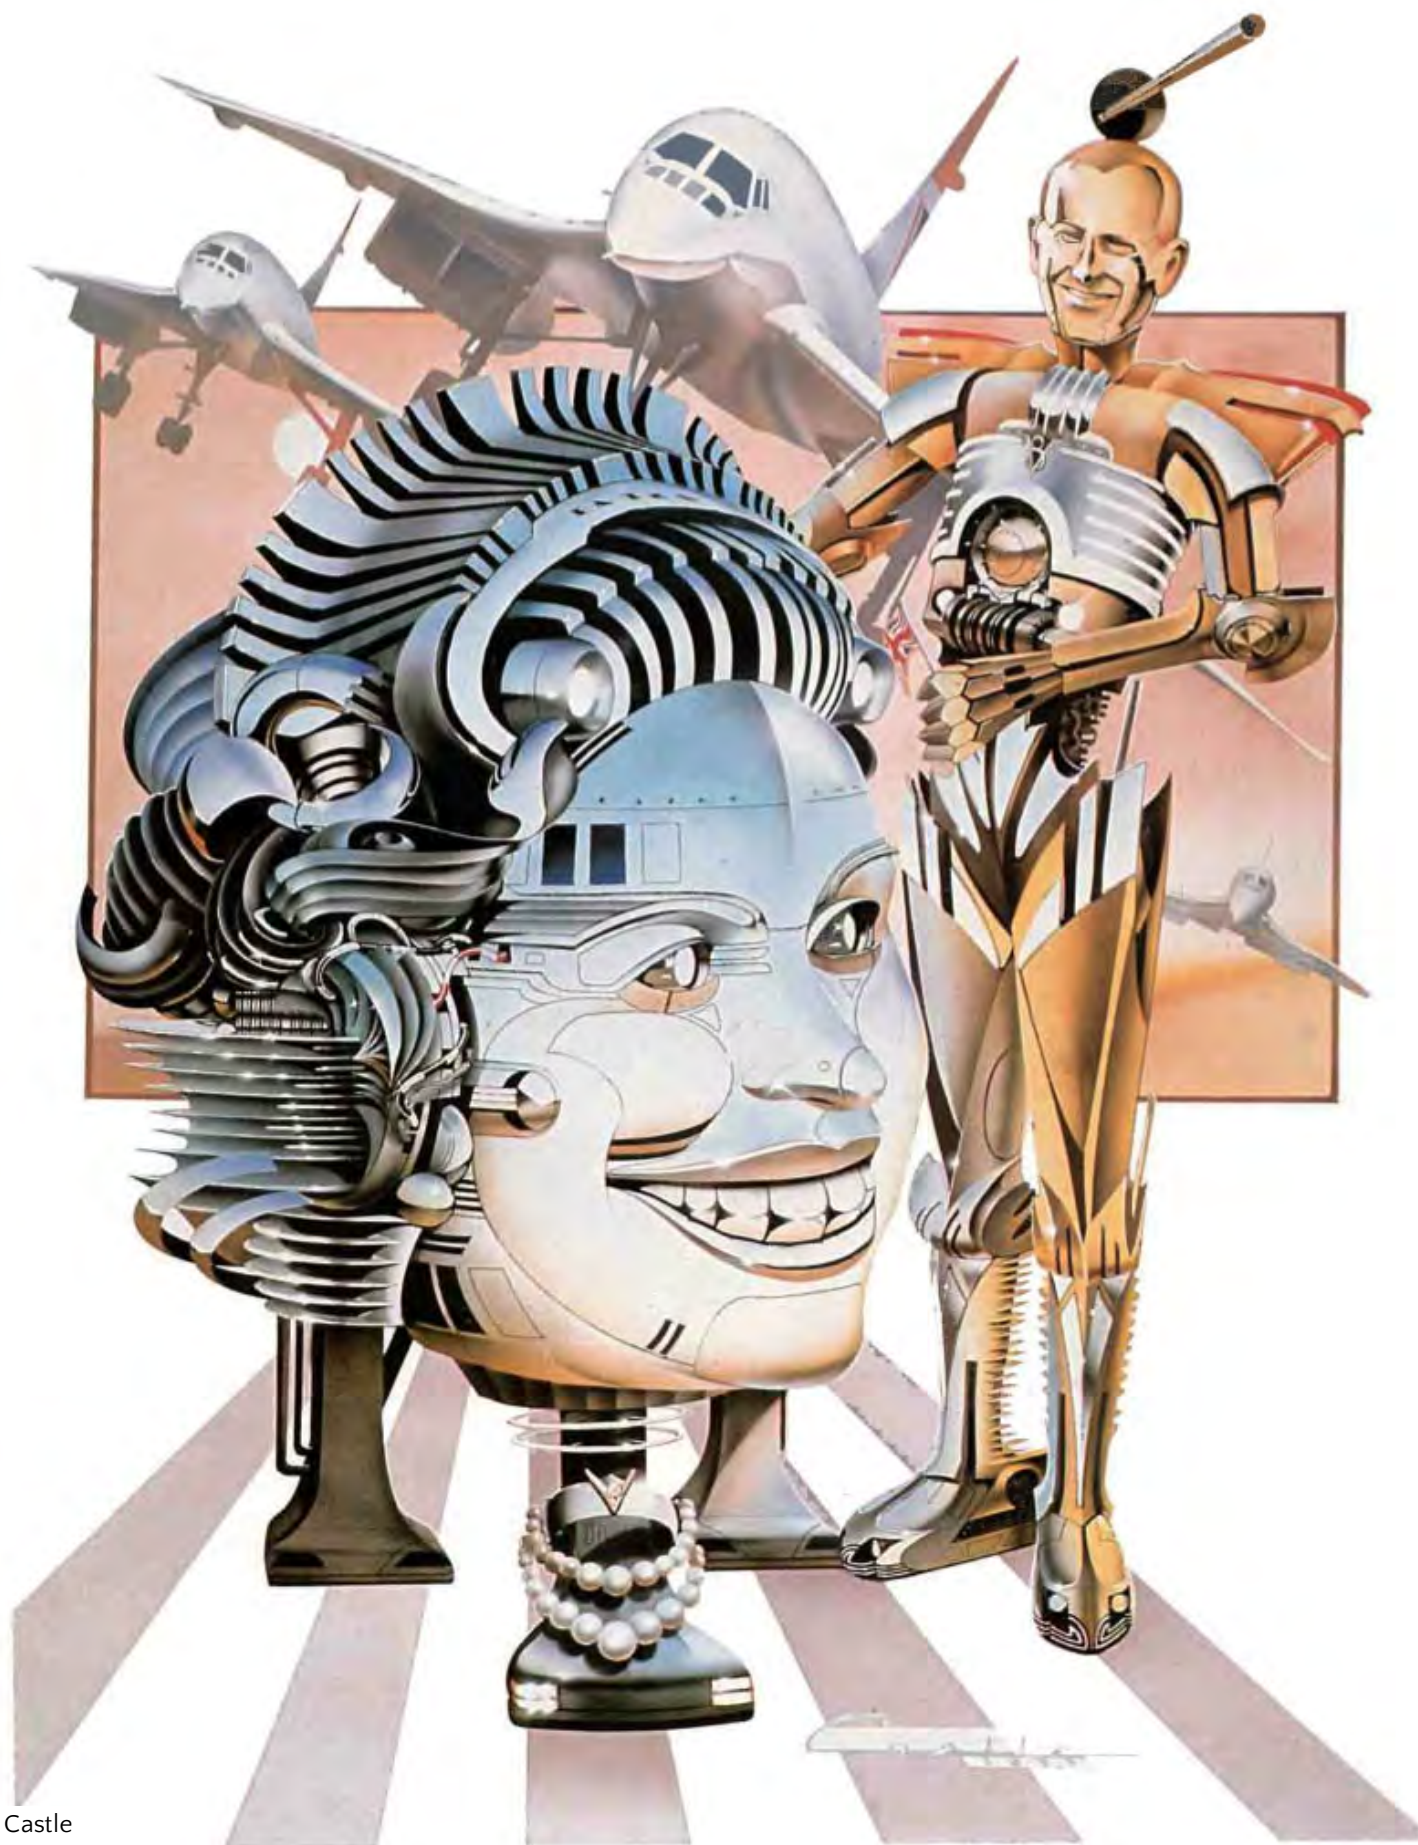

If you've been included but wish to be removed, please email Info@StarWarps.com.

If either you or your work is incorrectly credited, or you're listed as "Unknown", let us know.

We want to credit & acknowledge all.

I dedicate this to my mother Lila, and to my own rebel alliance: Max, Eve & Wini. May the force be with you guys, always.

My Force and I
Ink & Airbrush (1977)

This painting is the third version of an idea I had at the Royal College in 1965 when I was briefed to do a portrait of Her Majesty. I 'chromed' a head and set it in the form of a 1965 American car advertisement with copy to match – '66 Monarch with the punch line: "Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?" For my diploma show, I redid it using the airbrush (1967). So in 1977 for my own exhibition I thought it would be interesting to do a Jubilee painting and a 'Star Wars' souvenir combined.

'Star Wars' fantasy leads to slaying of hoaxter, 20

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Leigh Matz had fallen so deeply in love with "Star Wars" that the teen-age boy fell equally hard for a hoax and believed his script ideas were being considered for a sequel to the science-fiction movie.

But the fantasy exploded when the boy learned it was all a joke played on him by an older youth he had once thought of as his best friend.

The result: The older friend was stabbed more than 35 times with a kitchen knife, and his body dumped in front of his home.

A detective who investigated the killing last August called it "The Jedi Homicide."

Leigh's father now says his son is "mentally ill," and the older friend, who was 20 at the time of his death, was a "psychopath." But when the two suburban Kansas City youths met in 1979, they were just companions sharing an intense interest in science fiction. Like Leigh Matz, Ralph Cochran enjoyed science fiction and the George Lucas film saga that began with "Star Wars." Leigh was then 12 and Cochran 16.

Science fiction was "his life," said Leigh's father, Stanford Matz of Shawnee, Kan. "He wanted to see his name up there with George Lucas' in the 'Star Wars' sequels. It's all he thought about."

In August 1982, Cochran told Leigh he had met a Lucasfilm executive at a science-fiction convention in Chicago who invited him to submit design works for "Return of the Jedi," then in preparation. Cochran in turn invited Leigh to participate.

For much of the next year Leigh spent nearly all of his time working on drawings and stories for movies, often skipping school. Cochran told him he was sending his ideas to Lucas, and Leigh even began to receive notes of encouragement from the filmmaker, notes that turned out to be phony.

Then one of Cochran's fellow workers told Leigh he was the butt of an elaborate joke. The district attorney's office said later the realization enraged Leigh.

Leigh, 16 by this time, recruited his 13-year-old brother, Jimmy, telling him Cochran planned to kill their father.

The brothers ambushed the person Leigh once called his "very best friend." Cochran was stabbed as he sat in his car.

Leigh and Jimmy admitted their roles in the slaying to police.

Today Leigh writes science fiction in the Larned (Kan.) State Hospital, a mental facility. He pleaded guilty to second-degree murder. Jimmy, who pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter, will have his case reviewed every four months while he stays at the Youth Center at Atchison, Kan.

STAR

Kostas Seremetis

Trilogy

Visual & aural collage (2008)

A moving visual and aural collage consisting of the Star Wars Trilogy, artist Kostas Seremetis edited this 126 minute film, taking the left third of Star Wars, the middle third of Empire Strikes Back and the right third of Return of the Jedi, synchronizing them to dissonant effect. Every frame is a study in Abstract Expressionist Pop art as this moving collage of the most iconic films of our time moves to the sounds of the three films playing simultaneously. Characters move in and out of portions of the screen, ships and battles appear and disappear melding into one part of the screen from another part while the third portion of the screen portrays a crucial moment of discovery in a character's development.

Stormtrooper wears THOM BROWNE. NEW YORK
HE WEARS IT 002

The military soldiers unwaveringly loyal to the Emperor, stormtroopers represented the most visible extension of Imperial might. They were shock troops meant to strike with speed and accuracy, putting down insurrections and maintaining order on the farflung worlds of the Empire.

Clone Trooper wears A.P.C.
HE WEARS IT 004

At the time of their introduction, the Republic clone trooper represented the future of galactic warfare. Far superior to the battle droid armies of the era, the clone troopers formed the backbone of the Republic's new military initiative that battled against the forces of the Confederacy of Independent Systems.

Jango Fett wears COMME des GARÇONS

HE WEARS IT 007

The name Fett carries with it a cold air of dread and competence. To those with the credits to hire him, it is synonymous with success. To those with reasons to fear, Fett means capture or death. The name and reputation are just two of the many things Boba inherited from his father, Jango.

SCOUT TROOPER wears VIKTOR & ROLF

HE WEARS IT 006

The stormtroopers designated as scouts wear lightweight armor that is considerably more flexible than the standard uniform. Much like their infantry counterparts, scout troopers wear a black body glove covered with white armor. Scouts often work in conjunction with light reconnaissance vehicles, such as Imperial speeder bikes.

Boba Fett wears Supreme + visvim

HE WEARS IT 005

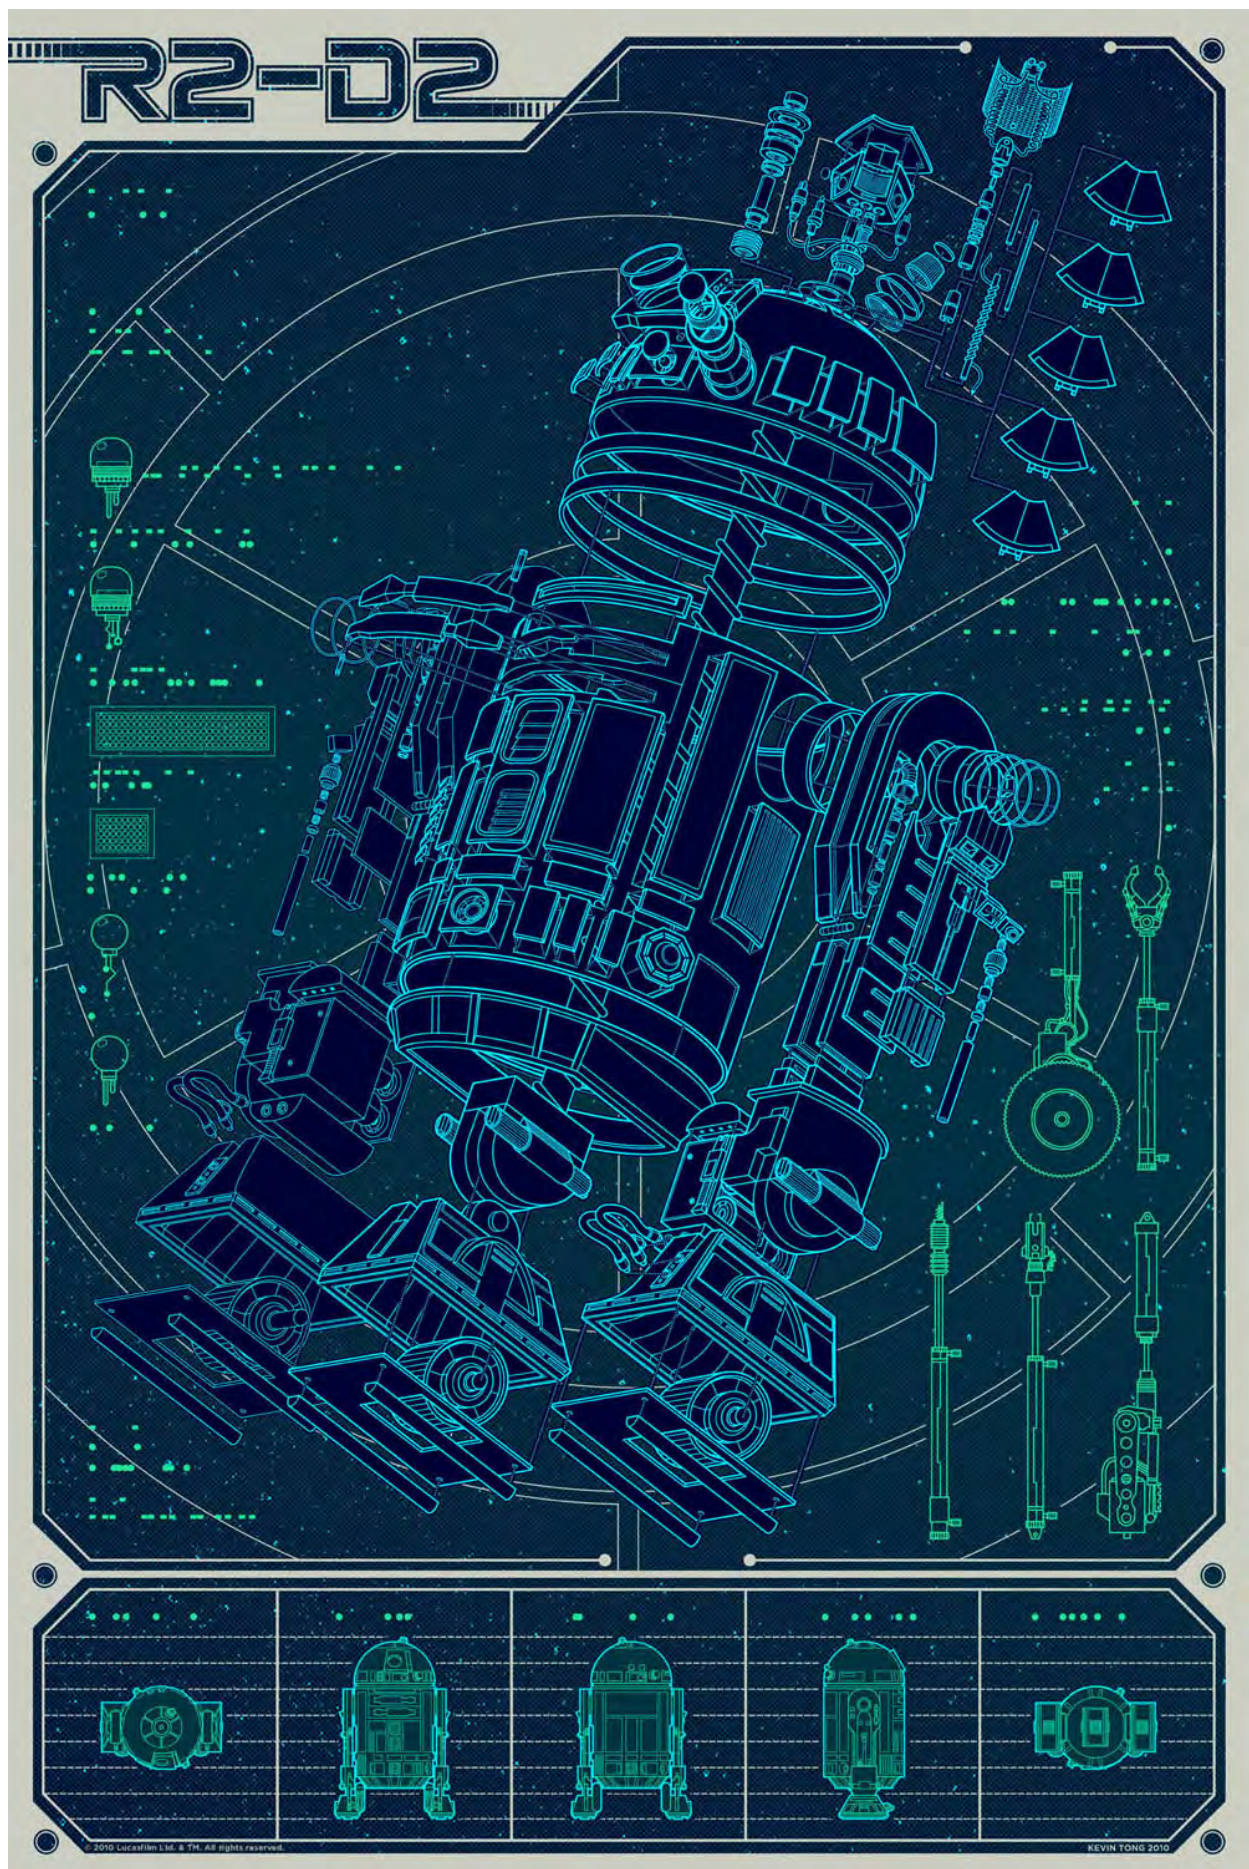

A faceless enforcer, Boba Fett's distinctive armor strikes fear in the hearts of fugitives. He is a legendary bounty hunter, accepting warrants from both the Empire and the criminal underworld. He is all business, laconic, and deadly.

Darth Vader wears BAND OF OUTSIDERS

HE WEARS IT 001

Darth Vader, Dark Lord of the Sith, was the scourge of the Jedi, a master of the dark side of the Force, and one of the Emperor's most trusted servants. He wasn't always a fearsome enforcer, however.

Lemon.

This ship has been called many things - a piece of junk, bucket of bolts, pile of scrap. From time to time it has problems making the jump to lightspeed, and occasionally it may even require a swift kick to get started.

But what you may not have heard is that this stock light freighter has, on more than one occasion, played a pivotal role in saving the lives of millions throughout the galaxy.

While she may not look like much on the outside this ship can still make the Kessel run in less than 12 parsecs (not to mention outrun Imperial starships - not the local bulk cruisers mind you - I'm talking about the big Corellian ships now.)

Some consider her a hunk of junk, while others refer to her as "the fastest hunk of junk in the galaxy."

So when you're searching for your next ship and you pass by one of these "Lemons", keep in mind that while this ship may not always work the way you want it to, this baby's still got a few surprises left in her.

You keep the plums, we'll pick the lemons.

LOST DOG

“Chewie”

Last seen at Mos Eisley dog park on 9/6/08, wearing a silver bandolier, flea collar and laser crossbow. Malamute - Wookiee mix, with a tan patch behind his right ear. Has all his vaccinations and is neutered and housebroken.

Also answers to "Fuzzball", and "Big Walking Carpet"

Good-natured, doesn't bite (though he has been known to tear people's arms out of their sockets when he loses at chess).
